

Time Was

By Michael Legge

Ron Slug, an unemployed husband with a wife and two kids, brings home a dented satellite television dish, which he got on discount along with four months of free service. Once he puts the dish on the roof, odd things start to happen. People appear and disappear in the house. Initially, Ron is the only one who sees them. Eventually, the kids see and speak to other kids.

Ron's wife, Dina, calls in her sister Nancy, a physics teacher, to talk to Ron privately. Nancy brings along her friend, a parapsychologist named Laine Edwards, who is called in to see if the house is infested with spirits. At this point, things go completely haywire as another family from a different time period appear to claim that the house is theirs.

Time Was is a sci-fi comedy for our time... or any time.
